ReachingOut Mentoring Programme

Initiative

Kimberly has helped to provide academic support as a mentor, to students of Dean Trust Ardwick and St Chrysostom CoE Primary School as well as assist the Program Officer in activities to foster the emotional and academic development of students. During her years as a tutor for the Jamaican Mathematical Olympiad, she observed an adamant abhorrence towards the subject of Mathematics. Consequently, one of her main objectives is to nurture the academic development of disadvantaged youth, through the improvement in their analytical skills and boost in self-confidence. Aside from the fact that ReachingOut is the largest mentoring charity in the UK, Kimberly participates in ReachingOut sessions as they aim to tackle educational inequality in young people from disadvantaged communities.

How Kimberly has made a difference

In spite of her busy schedule with her Masters, Kimberly has dedicated time, on a weekly basis, to the students of Dean Trust Ardwick and St Chrysostom CoE Primary School to help many young people who are in need of academic and emotional support. In addition to ameliorating academic confidence through one-on-one Maths and English sessions, each 2 hour session is geared towards promoting leadership, equality and academic confidence through team building activities and allows each student to embark on a character journey that revolves around one (or more) of four character strengths, namely Good Judgement, Fairness, Self Control and Staying in Power.
